General Data Protection Regulation Course
Understanding personal data protection obligations

In today's data-driven society, organizations rely on the collection and processing of customer data in ever-evolving ways. Employees working in these organizations share a duty to protect the rights of individuals' personal data, which includes complying with the EU General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) when utilizing data about individuals within the EU.

The GDPR, which will take effect May 25, 2018, is intended to harmonize data privacy laws across Europe, while expanding its territorial reach and strengthening the privacy rights of EU citizens. The GDPR replaces the EU's prior Data Protection Directive from 1995 and will automatically apply in all Member States without the need for implementing national laws or regulations.

Skillsoft's course "EU General Data Protection Regulation" outlines the purpose and general principles of the GDPR. Targeting a general employee audience, the course explains the obligations of controllers and processors, and discusses the major rights of data subjects, including the concept of consent. The course also offers strategies employees can adopt to support their organizations' compliance with the GDPR. Subject matter support for the content was provided by the law firm of Gordon Dadds, LLP.

"GDPR is about giving people more control over their data... while it may require an upfront investment in privacy fundamentals, but it offers a payoff down the line – not just in better legal compliance – but a competitive edge."

Elizabeth Denham, the UK Information Commissioner
